Sunday Morning Talk GOD'S PROVIDENTIAL CARE.

To our Heavenly Father, and to the angels whom He sends forth as ministers of His benefits, it is beyond doubt apparent, as to us it far too little is, what a close connection there is between providence and grace. How much the interest of our souls may be involved, in even the interests and transactions of ordinary life, we berhaps do not responsible to the interest of our souls may be involved, and the control of the minutes. Always test water with your own bare elbow. Keep cold cloth around head and neck. If convulsions are caused by eating improper food, the child in interest of our souls may be involved, in even the interests and transactions of ordinary life, we perhaps do not reflect as often as we should. That question, "What shall it profit a man if he gave the whole world and lose his own soul?" is something more than a text for sermons. It is a practical matter, Meeting us every day that we live. The world and the soul—these are the interests; not, indeed, incompatible with each other, but still so related in the present state of things as that in gaining the one the other may be lost. Must we not suppose that a matter which God has caused to be pressed upon our attention with such solemn emphasis, is of vast account to Him? Should we not anticipate that His dealings with us in respect to any worldly micreat, would have respect always, ultimately and above all, to the soul? Everything, besides, small or great, which to His perfect view is seen to bear upon the soul's interest, will gain consequence just from that fact.
